actualis cu lefusis

This image shows a page from a medieval manuscript. At the top left is a large, ornate initial 'D' enclosed in a double-lined gold frame. Below the initial, the Latin text is written in a Gothic script. The text is divided into four lines: 'Dicitur etiam', 'in qua nocte', 'nodus originis,', and 'ne cōtex'. Between the first and second lines, there is a small space where the word 'ga' would have been. The music is represented by four horizontal staves, each consisting of four red lines. The notes are black and white, with vertical stems pointing either up or down. The first staff begins with a large note, followed by a series of smaller notes. The second staff begins with a small note, followed by a series of larger notes. The third staff begins with a small note, followed by a series of larger notes. The fourth staff begins with a large note, followed by a series of smaller notes.
